

END-TO-END SECURITY FOR SCHOOLS

School districts spend years and billions of dollars outfitting their campuses with the best cameras, access controls and other physical security measures they can afford, all while mostly neglecting the security of their network, both from the outside as well as the inside. Many schools do not consider themselves targets. However, US Schools leaked 24.5 million records in 1,327 data breaches since 2005. Cyberattacks and ransomware targeting schools also hit record highs in 2020, with K-12 schools the top targeted sector. The average ransom was about $50,000, but some topped $1,400,000.*
